Hercules is back at Cuddy Mountain to continue our search for high-grade silver and copper deposits.

2024 EXPLORATION GOALS

Hercules is still at the beginning of a modern mine project's typical 13-year timeline.

This year, the Hercules team is focusing on:

- finding the highest-grade core of the recently discovered copper porphyry deposit
- uncovering more hidden silver deposits left behind by historic miners
- identifying and testing new mineral targets

The goal of exploration is to build on the initial findings from last year to learn more about the size, grade, and economic viability of the current identified critical minerals.

IMPORTANCE OF CORE

Coring, or core drilling/sampling, is a crucial process in exploration that helps get a better understanding of the size and location of mineral deposits. It involves extracting cylindrical samples (rock core) from the subsurface layers of the earth with a hollow drill bit that is attached to a drill rod.

Geologists then examine the core barrel to determine the rock type, mineral composition, structural features, and other aspects of the rock quality. This provides valuable insight into the geological characteristics of the area.

EXPLORATION METHODS

Our team is utilizing modern and environmentally sound techniques to sample and map the Hercules Silver Property.

Three low-impact drills are currently running 24/7 to pull cylindrical rock core from target sites for analysis

Continuation of soil sampling and field mapping with the use of hand shovels and hammers

Testing for geophysical anomalies to measure conductivity and chargeability of the ground

GETTING INVOLVED

We are excited to announce our sponsorship of the upcoming Washington County Fair and Adams County Fair!

We are proud to support so many great local organizations and businesses.

Hercules is also pleased to have added some local talent to our team.

Stay tuned from more employment and community opportunities!

SAVE THE DATE

Join us at our next community town hall to hear directly from the Hercules team!
